Computers in the English language classroom

Dear Teacher of English,

Computers are invading every branch of our lives. Companies, banks, airports, offices, hotels, radio and television stations have these smart machines. Why not let them into English language classrooms?

You should not be afraid of computers stealing all the attention in your classes. Remember that a computer is only a tool to assist the teaching and learning process - just like a cassette recorder, video or television. Computers, no matter how good, can never replace teachers. Before introducing computers to the classroom, both teachers and students need basic computing skills.

Many teachers are determined to get on the Internet and exploit the amazing resources available there, but at the beginning they do not have much faith that they will be able to achieve anything. Still, it is possible to accomplish more than you really dream of through a simple philosophy: learning by doing. Within a few months or weeks, you can learn how to design your own website and lead an Internet discussion group for teachers of English in Eastern and Central Europe.

Here are some useful tips for the shy ones:

1 _ The computer is a toy. Click on menus and see what options are available. Usually, you can undo most actions. Try out all possible steps.

2 _ No matter what happens, do not panic. There are help files to help you find out about a problem you might be having. If you are still confused, ask someone to help you.

3 _ You can learn a lot from books and magazines about computing. Additionally, some computer magazines give away free CDs with nice software on them.

4 _ There are only three rules here: try, try and try again. The computer is only an intelligent fool. If you don't succeed, turn it off and listen to music, watch TV or go for a walk. A few hours later get back to it and you might see things in a new light.

5 _ With the magic of computers in your English classroom go for correcting pronunciation, communicating with classes in other parts of the world via email, getting to know colleagues, sharing experiences, your students working on virtual projects with partner classes thousands of miles away ...

It is so fascinating and it is all just a click away!
